

Refrigeration Technician

As one of New Zealand's Premier Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Companies, our client has moved to a new level of engineering skill and service giving a new definition to Refrigeration Engineering.

With a focus on high performance and high quality engineering in both our products and our customer service, the company is now offering an opportunity for an experienced Service Technician that will add Customer Service capability to the business. Our client is a business that offers security, career progression and a firm commitment to the well being of employees and the environment as we enter an exciting period of growth over the next few years and beyond.

We are looking for a highly self motivated and experienced Refrigeration Service Technician with the ability to work unsupervised while managing time and outputs to become an integral part of our service teams and deliver outstanding service to our customers. The ability to diagnose, repair and maintain all forms of HVAC and refrigeration equipment is a must.

The main duties involve the servicing and repair of modern commercial refrigeration and air conditioning equipment.

If you are a trade qualified Refrigeration / HVAC Service technician and/or have a relevant qualification with a proven service technician background or with a Refrigeration licence, experience in breakdown repairs and preventative maintenance and are a good team player, have a strong customer focus and a good understanding of safety, then we welcome the opportunity to speak with you.

Other key essentials to be successful in this role include:

- Experience with Supermarket refrigeration would be advantageous;
- Ability to communicate professionally with our customers and to build and maintain excellent customer relationships;
- Belief in excellent customer service with a "can do" attitude;
- Current drivers licence;
- Passion for maintaining a safe work environment.
